

Supervisor Linda Parks' Quarterly Dinner Series

The Decline of Monarch Butterflies and Bees, and What Can Be Done About It

You're invited to hear guest speaker Cameron Newell, a Pollinator Conservation Specialist, discuss the status of Monarch butterflies and bees and effective ways to restore their populations at Supervisor Parks' next quarterly dinner event on December 6th. Monarch butterflies are being considered for the endangered species list. Their population has dwindled from more than 1 billion in the mid-1990s to 109 million last winter. The wild bee population has dropped by one quarter of its population in the last decade. Mr. Newell has worked on restoring native habitat on three continents. We hope you can join us for this fun and educational dinner experience!

Your reservation is guaranteed with your payment.

The dinner is $35 per person in advance.
