Ventura County Grand Jury

Appendices

Appendix I: Responses to 1998-1999 Grand Jury Report

Background

The 1998-99 Grand Jury was indeed busy. It released 17 reports, covering a wide variety of topics, from cable TV access to school safety, from county transportation to the year 2000 computer problem.

Figure 1 shows each of the 17 reports released and the agencies to which recommendations were addressed.

Findings

In all, 79 agencies responded to the reports released, although only 71 agency responses were required. Eight agencies chose to respond even though not formally requested to do so. Forty-five of those 71 agency responses, or 63%, were received by the deadline; the remaining 26 responses (37%) ranged from 2 days late to 88 days late. Figure 2 depicts the late responses.

In some cases, formal responses were received by the Grand Jury prior to the date indicated in Figure 1. Since the official date of receipt is the date the response was received by the presiding judge of the superior court, that date was used to determine which responses were late.

Considering the number and breadth of reports issued, this record of responses, while allowing room for improvement, is not altogether unreasonable.

On the other hand, any effort to determine the rate of concurrence with Grand Jury findings or the rate of implementation of Grand Jury recommendations is probably doomed to failure because some responses did not address these issues. For that reason, no attempt has been made to include a table depicting the rate of concurrence with Grand Jury findings or implementation of Grand Jury recommendations. Instead, Figure 3 depicts the total number of responses required to each committee's reports.

Conclusions

Approximately two-thirds of the agencies responded in a timely manner. If responses received by the Grand Jury prior to the deadline but not received by the presiding judge until after the deadline are included, the percentage of timely responses rises accordingly.

A substantial number of county department responses were compiled by the Chief Administrative Officer (CAO) and forwarded together under one transmittal letter. By the time the packet of responses was received by the presiding judge, some deadlines had already passed.

All responses received were reviewed by the Grand Jury, and, in five cases, a further response or additional clarification was requested from the responding agency.

Recommendations

1. Rather than wait to compile all county department responses to be forwarded to the presiding judge in one all-inclusive packet, the CAO should forward each department's response as it is received and reviewed.
2. All respondents should exercise care in meeting the requirements of Penal Code, Section 933.05, which states that each response first clearly state whether the respondent agrees with the finding or disagrees wholly or partially with the finding and the reasons therefor.

In response to each recommendation, that statute also requires that the respondent state whether each applicable recommendation has been implemented, or will be implemented (and when), or requires further analysis or will not be implemented (with reasons therefor).

3. All responses should be dated. An agency responding to two or more Grand Jury reports should forward each response on a separate letterhead which clearly identifies the Grand Jury report being addressed.
